

IMPORTANCE OF INTEGRATING FOU SKILLS IN LANGUAGE TEACHING

Abduraximova Nodiraxon Turdali qizi

A student of Fergana state university

Annotation This article mentions four factors in language learning: the ability to listen, read, write, speak, as well as the importance of fluency as well as their relationship with each other. The importance and advantages of combining these skills are reflected on.

Keywords: language learning, skills, listening, reading, writing, plastering, fluency, important factor, practice, key to success.

The importance of combining the four skills in Language Teaching is that when we learn our native language, we first listen, then speak, then study and finally write.

Listening, speaking, reading and writing are the four language skills we need to develop in order to fully communicate.

The four abilities are listed here below:

Listening

Talk

Reading

Writing

When we achieve these four skills, we will be able to master the language we want to learn. Listening and Reading are acceptable: access, that is, exposure to the real language you use. Speaking and writing are effective: output, that is, as part of the process of learning a second language, is considered the movement of language production, and on this path practice makes the language learning process perfect, that is, you need to practice four skills if you want to improve a certain skill. Thus, we will have to practice the four aforementioned skills from the beginning of language learning, that is, from the initial period. Listening to skills in the first place means an important skill that allows us to receive, understand and evaluate the information that has been communicated to us. As a person, we strive to communicate with each other every day. During the day, we exchange ideas with each other, inform our loved ones about the news. Therefore, listening is a tool that helps us adapt our approach to communicating with others at different levels and gives us the ability to respond or accept. Everyone's level of listening is varied, such as time, place, emotions, beliefs, etc. Another important skill is to be able to speak. This is often the most difficult of the four language skills, but soon it is our activity that we think we can speak a little English or Russian. But being able to speak a language fluently, beautifully and meaningfully also requires kata skill. If we think in our native language and then try to speak English, we will always have to translate between languages. Translation is not an easy task! Even people who are fluent in two or more languages have problems switching languages. A simple solution to this is in English. When we think in English, we notice that it is even easier for us to speak English. If possible, we need to take a few minutes of our day to stand in front of the mirror and talk, choose a topic, set the timer for two or three minutes and just talk to ourselves.

As for the third skill. If we want to learn English faster, it is important to read a lot. The more we read, the more our brain will learn about how language works. When we read in English, we can improve our vocabulary, grammar and writing skills at the same time. Reading is the best way to improve our vocabulary! The context of articles, stories and conversations will help us understand and understand the meaning of English words in a text that is new to us. And our last skill is the ability to write. Writing skills include all the knowledge and abilities associated with self-expression through the written word. It is the correct understanding of language through grammar, spelling and punctuation. People with excellent writing skills can adapt their tone and choice of words to different situations and people. In general, writing should follow a broad reading stage. This gives us the opportunity to actively use new words to have even more meaning. Summing up all the tips mentioned above and saying in a word, only the fact that we practice more will bring us success. Whatever learning style we have, whatever our native language, the key to mastering and mastering a foreign language is to practice it as much and as often as possible. Learning a new language can be difficult. In order for anyone who has ever learned a new language to achieve fluency, four basic skills will always be needed, and this is important.

Bibliography

1. Allman, B. Freeman, S. Owner, J. Palow, S. and Shiotsn, V. (2000) skills for successful teaching. McGraw_Hill children's publishing.
2. Brown, D.H. (2000) principles of language learning and teaching. Fourth edition. Addison Wesley Longman, Inc.
3. Brown, D.H teaching by principles and interactive approach to language pedagogy. Second edition. _Brown, G. Atkins, M. (2002) effective teaching in higher education.
4. Celce-Murcia, M. Teaching English as a second or foreign language. Retrieved from: www.princeton.edu/pia. TEFL